

Contents

I. Acknowledgments	7
II. Introduction	9
 Part I - Language acquisition and bilingualism
On the Place of Rhotics: A case study on the acquisition of French /ʁ/ Marijn van 't Veer	23
Acquisition of English [ʃ] by adult Pakistani learners Nasir A. Syed	41
On rhotics in a bilingual community: A preliminary UTI research Lorenzo Spreafico & Alessandro Vietti	57
 Part II - Phonetics and phonology
Articulatory coordination in obstruent-sonorant clusters and syllabic consonants: Data and modelling Philip Hoole, Marianne Pouplier, Štefan Beňuš & Lasse Bombien	81
Articulating five liquids: A single speaker ultrasound study of Malayalam James M. Scobbie, Reenu Punnoose & Ghada Khattab	99
The many faces of /r/ Mary Baltazani & Katerina Nicolaidis	125
Another look at the structure of [r]: Constricted intervals and vocalic elements Carmen-Florina Savu	145
New insights into American English V+/r/ sequences María Riera & Joaquín Romero	159
/r/ in Washili Shingazidja Cédric Patin	173

Prosodic factors in the adaptation of Hebrew rhotics in loanwords from English Evan-Gary Cohen	191
--	-----

Part III - Language variation and change

A preliminary contribution to the study of phonetic variation of /r/ in Italian and Italo-Romance Antonio Romano	209
The spreading of uvular [ʀ] in Flanders Hans Van de Velde, Evie Tops & Roeland van Hout	227
Instability of the [r] ~ [ʀ] alternation in Montreal French: An exploration of stylistic conditioning in a sound change in progress Gillian Sankoff & Hélène Blondeau	249
List of contributors.....	267